FINCH GIL'S BODY IN PLYMOUTH POND

FEAR MISSING BOY WITH WHOM SHE WENT RIDING IS DROWNED

Plymouth, Dec. 4.—Barless, and floating in a few feet of water, the body of Sarah Swift, beautiful Chiltonville girl, missing since Monday, was found in Little Pond by a party of Boy Scouts today.
Police immediately started dragging the pond on the theory that the body of Antonio Thomas, with whom the girl went for an auto ride Monday night, might be in the pond.
Search for Thomas' car was also started. The girl's death is shrouded in mystery and police are finding explanation for the presence of the body in the pond.
NO MARKS OF VIOLENCE.
The autopsy theory was rejected when police learned that the body of water is very shallow around the edges. A person would have to walk in for a distance of almost 20 feet before going beyond his or her depth.
The theory, which was first advanced, explained the presence of the girl's body by supposing that Thomas' car might have got out of control and dove into the pond, trapping the couple. This theory was also rejected by police.
The beach around the pond is low and sandy. As it approaches the water it becomes muddy. Police say it would be impossible for a car to go beyond its depth in the water because its progress would be retarded both by the mud and shallow water.
Medical Examiner Hill, however, after examining the girl's body at an undertaking establishment, said death was due to drowning. He planned an autopsy later. He said.

Chicago, Dec. 4 (U. N. S.).—Mickey Walker of New Jersey will not become a middleweight boxing champion of the world as a result of the decision given here last night at the end of the last round against Tiger Flowers by Referee Benny Yang.
The Illinois Boxing Commission, at a meeting hastily called today, was offered a resolution by a member, whose name was withheld, that the body reserve Tiger and return the title to Tiger Flowers of Atlanta.
The two other members of the commission were reported to be in accord with the author of the resolution and announcement that Yang's decision would not stand was expected later today.
At the same time it was reported a sweeping investigation of the Walker-Flowers bout would be ordered.

GLEASON KILLED MAN TO GET CASH TO TAKE OUT HIS GIRL FRIENDS

Confessing completely to the killing of James Angie, Medford storekeeper, in a holdup last Saturday night, Herbert Gleason of No. 76 Sheridan street, Jamaica Plain, placed himself in the shadow of the electric chair for first degree murder today—his twentieth birthday.
"I died the three shots. I was dead broke, and I had to have money to take out my girl friends in Jamaica Plain and Roxbury," he said.
His confession came after six and a half hours of grilling at Medford police headquarters by State Detectives Sherlock and O'Neil, Chief of Police Walsh and other Medford officers.
He was arraigned in Malden District Court, charged with first degree murder, waived a hearing, and was held without bail to appear in court again on December 11 before Judge Thomas P. Riley. Meanwhile a Grand Jury indictment will be sought by the authorities.
Two Roxbury girls, whose names in full are Gleason's, and one of whom he calls his sweetheart—will be questioned by authorities to see if they can get light on the whereabouts of a brother, one of whom is believed to have been Gleason's wife in crime.
"My sweetheart" were the words used by Gleason after one of the men in the diary.
"My wife's sweetheart," he wrote after the other name.
His sorrowing father, who accompanied him here with Maine State police from the Gleason home in Bangor, Me., where the arrest took place, broke down and wept like a child after the confession, although naturally from his elation, rather than from grief.
"You didn't do it, son," he sobbed.

Boy's Confession in Medford Slaying

The full confession of Herbert Gleason to the murder of James Angie, Medford storekeeper, as made to the Medford and State police, follows:
"Saturday night I left my home at 9 o'clock and met my chum about 15 minutes later. We took an elevated train to Sullivan square and walked out Broadway, Somerville, to Main street, in South Medford. I had been in Boston two months and working only one week and one night in a restaurant. I lost my job and was dead broke. I needed some money and so did."

HALL WIDOW SMILE THAT WON'T COME OFF NOW

HE LAMES HER DAILY PARTIES

Los Angeles, Dec. 4 (A.P.).—Differences for a truce between Charlie Chaplin and his estranged wife having failed, they settled down today for a finish fight in court after an exchange of statements which brought some of the family skeletons out of the luxurious closets of the film comedian's new Beverly Hills mansion.

Chaplin's statement denied Mrs. Goddard's charges of cruelty. He declared he had opened his circle of friends to her with the intention of making her happy but that she preferred acquaintances of her own and entertainments staged without his presence.

He also charged she had stolen the privilege of unlimited credit but had granted her in shops and cafes of Los Angeles.

CALLED HER FOLKS "YELLOW"
Shortly after this statement Mrs. Goddard countered with one in which she accused the comedian of avoiding her because she was "not intelligent" and of calling her family "yellow." She also maintained she had made many of her own clothes after marriage.

The latest break followed a conference between attorneys for Mr. and Mrs. Chaplin at which an effort was made to learn what kind of a property settlement would be necessary to keep the case out of court.

LOVEURNS FUGITIVE ON HER

Her wedding dreams shattered, her fiancé gone with $733 she had entrusted to him, Miss Ruth LeCain of West Newton street, Back Bay, appealed today to the police of three cities for aid.

Borrowing $1,000 from her sister, she went to New York with telephone Chabot, clerk in a Providence hotel, and there the couple got a marriage license.

With them was the sister, Catherine LaCain, no chaperone. Chabot was given the money to arrange for a wedding trip. He left their New York hotel, saying he would be back in a few minutes. He wasn't.

Miss LeCain was finally disillusioned and returned to Providence where police learned Chabot left his employment with no word to his chiefs, after taking from the cash drawer the exact sum due him.

Boston, Providence and New York authorities are on the lookout for him. He is described as thirty, of slight build, dark-haired, with hazel eyes. His home is in Weymouth, Springfield, Mass. LeCain is from Norfolk, Va., he said.

"My money bought three suits of clothes for him and several times I filled his purse with cash for ever empty," she said. "He has broken my heart but I can only return I will forgive him. He won my love and fortune."

TAKE BOOTLEG VEST TO COURT

A copper vest, the latest thing from bootlegging sartorial experts, was tried on Judge James P. Finner of the Municipal Court today by liquor officers from the 2nd street station, who charged Abraham Seider of South Russell street with being the owner.

Sergeant John Manning and Of. Fred Carr and Corbin appeared before Judge Dowd asking for a warrant. They charged Seider was an office-to-office bootlegger who made his daily rounds in the business district selling his wares from the three-gallon copper vest.

Judge Dowd asked to see the vest. It was taken to the judge's lobby where it was tried on Judge Parmenter. It fitted snugly and conformed in line and material with the best Bond street offerings for the season.

This is the first time a bootlegging vest has been found in Boston. There have been other schemes in vogue since prohibition, and the latest, attempts at clever concealment. Seider was held in jail for the night, December 3, after the warrant was issued.

This was the warning received in a letter by the state's attorney, according to Police Inspector John Mitchell, who acted for Benton in cooperating with the Federal authorities investigating the pool.

"Now then, $250,000 a year was spent around here on one of these pool games," said Mitchell.

The Boston men invited are Arnold Heide, Henry Heide, Michael Powers, Joseph O'Brien, Francis D. Lavelley, Allen C. Rice, Walter A. White, James J. O'Neil and Louis Montmarquet. Through counsel, Attorney Joseph W. Carroll, they have arranged to appear in Federal Court Monday.

BETTY ALDEN ON SOCIETY Curtis Sisters in Double Wedding Ceremony

MISS MARGARET AND MISS PENELOPE CURTIS, hand-some daughters of Mrs. Edwin U. Curtis, give publicity to the wedding chronicle with their double ceremonial today in the Leslie Lindsay Chapel of Emmanuel Church. Not for many a moon has our Smart Set been served with two brides at once, and seldom in any moon have two such spirited and individual girls walked up the bridal aisle at the same time. Mrs. Curtis attended the weddings.

THEIR ENCLE ON THE PATERNAL SIDE, Nelson Curtis, gave them in marriage. Miss Margaret Curtis became Mrs. Henry M. Bollen and Miss Penelope Curtis, Mrs. Charles W. Greenough after the Rev. Dr. Edward Worcester tied the nuptial knots. Young girl attendants were none, so the entire limelight belonged to the radiant brides. They were married in gossamer frocks, smart creations from an inspired Parisian designer.

MISS PENELOPE CURTIS, slender and chic and the elder of the sisters, were a radiant blue, very much of the softest color, predominating in the beautiful material of the chapel. Miss Margaret Curtis, prettily boned, wore the smart new red. Both gowns glided with fine lines of gold and gold tassels, cleverly placed. Both girls wore tulle, tulle of black velvet and gold metal cloth, and shoes of black and gold. And both carried formal bouquets. And to all this smartness, as a final touch, they added the smartest of black velvet capes which they wore away on the honeymoon's first stages.

ONE SET OF NEWLY-WEDES GOES SOUTH for a honeymoon and the other goes Northward. When they return in some six weeks the Henry W. Bollen goes to their new home at No. 341 Marlborough street, and the Charles W. Greenough to No. 416 in the same fine thoroughfare. That these romances do not take two such attractive girls away from their Boston environment is a matter of congratulations. So many weddings recently have taken Boston girls to other cities.

THEY POURED BY A QUARTETTE of important matrons and served by a galaxy of younger women led informally of the late afternoon of Sunday at the Repertory Theatre when Otto Kuba shall have completed his talk on the theatre hour of chat over the telegraph in his order. Mrs. Homer L. Bigelow, Mrs. William B. Rice, and Miss Nancy Vose are in the party, to ask if it will be cream or lemon, and Madames Norman Frost Greiner, Frederick Holmes Curtis, Cyrus Smith and Henry Jewett serve at the altar.

THE OCCASION IS DECORATED BY A FLOCK OF YOUNG GIRLS. Ushers are Miss Frances Bragaglia and Miss Elizabeth Curtis, Miss Isabel Thorndike, Miss Katherine Hodges, Miss Elizabeth Curtis, Miss Gladys Dwyer, Miss Mary Winslow and Miss Gloria Bragaglia. Mr. Kuba's talk on Sunday is an event, pleasantly anticipating the set that got only believe implicitly in the Repertory movement but works for it heart and soul.

SIMPLICITY ITSELF WAS THE FLOCK of pale seafoam green which Miss Edith Wolcott wore at the large and gorgeously arranged which was headed by Miss Frances Bragaglia and Miss Elizabeth Curtis. Miss Gladys Dwyer, Miss Mary Winslow and Miss Gloria Bragaglia. Mr. Kuba's talk on Sunday is an event, pleasantly anticipating the set that got only believe implicitly in the Repertory movement but works for it heart and soul.

"EVERYBODY" IN THE SOCIAL WORLD was there. Motor after motor flashed up and away, leaving its burden of beauty, gown and femininity and formally turned out men. The Wolcott guests sat in the Assembly hall, the supper dance sets, the bride set and the bride set all in one. In truth everyone of importance on the social heights went to Miss Wolcott's ball. And life and light, radiance and color marked the scene.

MISS MARY WELT AT EVERY TURN was hailed with good wishes for her engagement to Mr. Piquet. Just announced last evening. The petite Miss Welt and her beau companion, Miss Ella Shelling, arrived together at the Wolcott affair. Mrs. Rockhill Brewster Potts, who entertained over a hundred guests at dinner, chief dinner hostess of the evening, wore flaming scarlet. Mrs. E. H. Hingham Wolcott, her daughter, was killed in white.

Court. No announcement was made, but the case outlook was taken to mean no acquittal was reached. George (Babe) Chaplin, representing Mrs. Chaplin, talked about some in at $1,000,000.

Mrs. Chaplin left the home of the star Tuesday and announced she would never return. This followed an early morning party at the home which ended when Chaplin ordered his wife to turn the guests out.

HE SAYS "IT'S ABSURD." Mrs. Chaplin indicated she would not ask an absolute divorce, but would seek a permanent maintenance. Chaplin's statement follows: "I have read Mrs. Chaplin's accusations of cruel and inhuman treatment. Such absurd accusations I emphatically deny."

"I have done everything possible to make Mrs. Chaplin happy in a rational way. My sole desire has been to maintain a sane and peaceful happy home for my wife, my babies and myself, and I have done everything possible to contribute to this."

"I surrounded her with every comfort and granted her every desire. Her mother lived with us. In fact, her whole family lived the free run of my house. If this constitutes cruel and inhuman treatment then I do not know the meaning of the word."

Immediately after our marriage I allowed her unlimited credit with all cafes, hotels and stores in the city. Perhaps sacrificing these tastes was a mistake, as these privileges have been abused."

"WANTED OWN FRIENDS." "Very often I have returned from work only to find that she had been out all day, leaving the babies with the nurse. On other occasions I would find a party of strangers, to whom I had never been introduced, in my home."

"I have lived in Los Angeles fifteen years. I believe I have gained a large number of interesting friends. These friends loyally welcomed Mrs. Chaplin into my home believing my friends would interest Mrs. Chaplin in my home."

MARINE FACES TRIAL IF HE GIVES BLOOD TO SAVE GIRL

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 4. (A. P.)—J. V. Moore, 28, a marine, faces courtmartial if he persists in an attempt to save a life.

Mildred Manning, 15, lies in a critical condition as the result of a blood transfusion. Constant hemorrhage makes a blood transfusion necessary. The girl is in the hands of the family submitted to blood tests, but these were futile and an appeal was made to military. All volunteered. Moore was selected for the sacrifice.

Major E. P. Moore announced the tests were made in violation of Navy regulations and that Moore could not offer his blood without a special permit from Washington. "It is noble of the boy, but if he discards the order he faces courtmartial," Major Moore declared.

SHOOTING MYSTERY SOLVED AS SUICIDE

The mystery surrounding the death of Giovanni Mangiat, prominent Italian contractor of New Street, who was shot from three bullets, was solved today when the police said that the man had committed suicide.

A Compact, Comfortable Dutch Colonial Type Cottage

With cable end carport to the street, neat front entrance and side porch, this white shingled, gambrel-roofed six-room cottage is altogether quite charming.

Upon entering the vestibule the first impression is that of interesting arrangement of details of the large, cheerful living room beyond. In the center of the long inside wall a fireplace is a large, inviting brick fireplace. At the nearer end this nicely proportioned room is the open staircase and large coat closet.

The conveniently arranged dining room has three windows and the kitchen has two.

The bedrooms on the second floor are cheerfully arranged. The bathroom is conveniently placed.

BEAUDET BOILERS HELPS TO SOLVE OIL OR GAS 'WHAT TO GIVE'?

Working on the principle that boilers built primarily for the burning of oil will be less effective with gas as fuel than a boiler especially built for oil burning, the Beudet Foundry Inc. has during the past few years put upon the market the Beudet Oil Burning Boiler.

This boiler has been subjected to tests over a three-year period and has proven efficient.

The generation of heat begins at the top of the dome with the action of the down draft, and pre-heating is done through the fire space.

A feature of the Beudet Oil Burning Boiler is the fact that it, for any reason, the oil for fuel is not available, it may be operated with gas as fuel.

The Beudet Foundry Inc., whose offices are in the Myler Standard Building, on Beacon Street, have installed this heating equipment in a great many of the residences of this section with satisfactory results.

NEW FIELDS OPENING FOR WELDING PROCESS

Experiments have recently shown that the possibilities in the field of welding have barely been tapped and many unusual uses are being found to the new uses for the process. It is said that a mammoth bridge or a great building has greater strength through welding than through riveting.

The Bay State Welding Company, of No. 1441 Columbus Avenue, Roxbury, have been leaders in local fields.

They have recently completed, constructed entirely by welding a gate in one piece in which there are no bolts, no threads, no nuts or mechanical means of holding the parts together except welding.

Welding is used not only to unite the frame of gate but also to form the letters which spell "Welding" on its top. These letters are 30 inches high for the W, ranging down to 20 inches high for the G.

Even the hinges are one piece and welded.

Another recent development in the welding process has been successfully applied by the company to the construction of automobile cylinder blocks whereby it is not necessary for the cylinder blocks to be removed from the car for repair. Blocks were welded without removal from the car have saved automobile owners not only time, but many dollars as one day service is furnished.

Likewise rear end housings and cracked transmission cases are welded in the car without even removing the gears.

This means almost impossible but is being done daily in this shop.

Other very interesting objects of art such as candle sticks, lamps, metal basins and bed ends made entirely by welding have been developed by this company. These objects are constructed by drop of hot metal which has passed through approximately 16,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

LACK OF THIRT CASE OF ILLS

By RAY R. HEDGECOCK.
Treasurer, Winter Hill Co-operative Bank.

This is the concluding installment of the famous story on savings which was written 16 years ago and published in almost every State in the country.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.
Two cousins, James and Henry, started in life for themselves at the age of 20 years, equally equipped. James immediately started to save by taking shares in a co-operative bank, and Henry, who has since of a nice fortune easily made, spends what he gets each week.

The years go by with James accumulating a competency and Henry still dreaming.

At the age of 41 Henry gives up the idea of trying to save, and he is not quite living up to his income.

His cousin notes with his cousin James, who upon a smaller salary, has saved $7,500. Henry is depressed, and decides it has been his fault that he has not been able to do so.

He has been told that he has received $3 a week he could have lived more comfortably.

He is advised by his cousin, as he has been, to do so.

New Kane Furniture Co. Warehouses

Second Largest in Boston

Growth of business has resulted in the Kane Furniture Company acquiring a series of five buildings at Columbus Avenue and Camden Street for new warehouses. The new depot is strategically located on a railroad so that freight shipments come directly into the Kane yards.

Increased growth of business by the Kane Furniture Company has made it necessary to take over the entire series of buildings at Columbus Avenue and Camden Street for new warehouses.

By using these new and larger warehouses, the Kane Furniture Company has long been planned, but which restricted space made before impossible.

Strategically located for purposes of receiving and shipping, they will enable the company to handle four times the amount of furniture the former warehouses could accommodate.

They are the main line of the New Haven, so that entire freight trains can come directly into the Kane yards for unloading.

Even approaching the efficiency of the receiving facilities are the shipping facilities. Plans for remodeling the street front to enable trucks to be loaded immediately.

An ingenious application of the building practice, each truck will use its own private dock or parking place. There will be no delay upon its return a load will be waiting and no searching for loads, all of which results in economy.

Containing over 20,000 feet of daylight floor space, the new Kane warehouses will be the second largest in Boston. High ceilings and wide doors and openings permit unobstructed housing of furniture, and make its handling simple and systematic.

In the new warehouses, a special finishing department is being installed, where expert cabinet makers and finishers will impart the final touches to furniture according to the customer's wishes.

Greatly increased warehouse space and more flexible handling will result in operating savings, all of which will be reflected in lower costs for furniture according to Harry Kane, president of the company.

AT TOP OF HEAP is J.M. Maloney, South Boston's battling heavyweight. He is now rated with the leading contenders for the crown worn by Gene Tunney, and shares honors with our own Jack Sharkey.

VETERAN IN AGAIN. Alfred Goulett, the ancient pedal pusher, is again trying his speed and stamina in a six-day race. This time Alf is entered in the New York grind.

EVERETT PINS HOPE TO HIS TOE. This is Richard Ahlin, captain of the Everett High School football eleven, the greatest football hoister in local schoolboy ranks. He will be a factor in today's fray with Brookline.

IN OLD FORM.

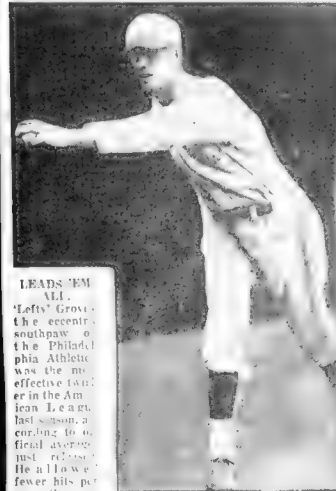

Al Mello, Lowell's rising welterweight, who is to clash with Jack Zivic of Pittsburgh at the Arena, December 13, in a return bout. In a previous meeting at Braves Field, June 2, Zivic was awarded a decision after a slushing battle.

UNANIMOUS CHOICE. Brown's captain and sterling end, Harold Broda, is the universal choice for an end position on all the All-America and All-Eastern elevens.

LEADS 'EM ALL. 'Lefty' Gross, the eccentric southpaw of the Philadelphia Athletics, was the most effective batter in the American League last season, averaging in a official average just released. He allowed fewer hits per game than any of his contemporaries.

EAGLES' GREATEST ATHLETE. This is Deney Namara, the Boston College backfield star, who is called the greatest athlete at the school on the Heights by Coach Frank Cavanaugh. Cavanaugh said much of the success of the Eagles was due to this brilliant performer.

STAGE CALLS SWIMMER. Eva Morrison, New England woman distance swimming champion, who has received an offer to enter vaudeville.

CHAMP FIGHTS FOR RIGHT TO FIGHT. Gene Tunney (center) was pinched in New York for boxing in a theatre without first obtaining a permit from the Boxing Commission. He was released in $500 bail, and his case will be called in court next Thursday. Tunney's counsel (the short gent on the right) is Dudley Field Malone, who usurped a lot of publicity by becoming the manager of Trudy Ederle, English Channel conqueror.

OFF FOR TEST. Louis Timson, the Lynn long distance swimmer, is now on his way to California to compete in the Catalina swim and for the $25,000 offered by William Wrigley to the successful contestant.

CORRECT POSTURE

By MARIA JERITZA

If you carry your neck and back straight the rest of your body will fall to correct posture. Try to remember also that the weight of your body should follow a plumb line from the top of your head at the center to the arches of your feet.

Here are two simple exercises to strengthen and supple the upper part of your neck. The second to bring slender symmetry and strength to your lower back and thighs.

The first consists in lying on your face downward, with your hands clasped at the back of your neck, and lifting yourself as far off the floor as you can without moving your feet, or bending your back. At first you may have to catch your feet underneath a bureau or sofa in order to lift yourself backward and upward in this way. But in time your muscles will grow so strong that you will not find the exercise a lift.

The second exercise consists in lying on your back, with your arms straight and try to kick with each leg alternately, lifting from your head. Be sure not to bend your knees. This will relax the muscles and nerves at the base of your spine, and is an excellent all-round exercise as beneficial to your upper grace as to your health and strength.

Drainage an exercise once or twice a day. If you will go through these and similar exercises every morning, ten times in a row, you will find them. And they will give you the well-known, symmetrical body and fine grace that are so essential to modern ideas of feminine beauty.

DAILY SHORT STORY

JULIA RYAN adjusted her radio ear phones, then tuned in as the bronze clock on her wall desk struck the hour of eight.

There were two bright spots in the inevitable broadcast came clearly through. For several weeks now the silver-toned voice of Gordon Mason had been Julia's inspiration and she was forced to admit that although the comely story book heroine who fell in love with unseen forces she had undeniably done this very thing.

The ringing of the telephone brought a frown to her generally serene brow in fact she had half a mind to leave it unanswered, but it persisted so that it distracted her attention. It brought an angry glow to her blue eyes, for she was sure at the moment that the other end of the wire.

She breathed a somewhat better "yes" through the microphone, as she gazed longingly at the radio across the room.

"Is that you, Julia?" exclaimed an excited voice.

"Yes!" came the somewhat short and crisp reply.

"Listen, honey! My uncle who has been in town for a couple of weeks just sent me two tickets for the 'Raggs' and we've just time to make the first act."

"Sorry Jim! But how many times must I tell you that my Wednesday evenings are engaged?" There was a doubt where the two of them.

"Look here, Julia! I'm getting tired of this Wednesday night business. What's gotten into you the past two weeks?"

"I don't know. I report to you everything I do." Her voice had an impatient ring. For Julia realized that in another half-hour her golden voice would fade away for another week, and besides, the series of Wednesday night concerts were drawing to a close.

"Well, Jim's voice sounded throaty, then, continued, 'you must admit that your actions are a bit strange. You are much more interested in the radio than in me.'"

Suddenly the connection was cut off abruptly.

Julia drew a sigh of relief, not again came the insistent buzz of the telephone bell.

"They cut us off, Julia!" She could just catch his words. "I can hardly hear you Jim and I'm in a hurry!"

"Wait, Julia, I demand an explanation! After all you are an expert on the radio. You are engaged to me and these mysterious evenings are getting my nerves!"

"Jim, we ARE engaged, but it is on that tone to me we'll never be married! Never!"

Julia could hear him gasp as she put up the receiver with a tone of her early school days as she had sent over to the radio to listen to Jim's invisible horns.

Jim, of course, was a fair but this Julia never spotted corners. She could still hear the echo of his voice and often she pictured him to her self, a young man, tall and slender, with dark hair and laughing eyes, a contrast to Jim's fair, wavy hair and smiling countenance. She longed to see this hero of hers and she lived in hope that fate would some day bring them together.

For a full week Julia heard nothing from Jim. Although slightly baffled at his indifference, her radio tenor still had the power to thrill her and when she found that he was to appear in person at the "Odeon" her joy abounded.

Julia lived for this evening of song, so when Jim finally telephoned her she gladly accepted his invitation to meet his uncle, the donor of the theatre tickets. She loved Jim the more because he never strayed from his word.

Tuesday dawned bright and the house felt full of his presence. She felt too ill to sit out of the house for night she was too ill to run her head from her pillow, too weak and now faded to attend the theatre.

"By the way, Julia, Uncle Gordon is giving a dinner at the Carlton next Wednesday night after his radio tour. I told him that you were engaged for the evening."

"By the way, Julia, Uncle Gordon is giving a dinner at the Carlton next Wednesday night after his radio tour. I told him that you were engaged for the evening."

For a moment Julia seemed at a loss for words, then bravely answered, "I wouldn't be surprised," she thought, she cried:

"Why, Jim, the only engagement I have is with my new radio. I—"

"I bet she's fallen in love with your radio voice, Uncle Gordon!" Turning, he addressed her, "You know, dear, Uncle Gordon loves letters in a young radio lane who think he is a sheik!"

Jim smiled at his Uncle and added, "It's not a sheik, but a prince, for he has presented us with a little home—our very own so you see I would not blame you for falling in love with him!"

With gleaming eyes Julia gazed into the dark crease of her curtain. "I wouldn't be surprised," she exclaimed, "I haven't been doing that very thing!"

Jumping up she rushed to where Gordon Mason sat with his head on his smooth brow, for after all, her radio horn had turned out to be a fairy godfather in disguise, and although he was far from the ideal hero, she loved him just the same.
